lively the good they derive from holy rest. I don't perceive it, because I am roving in dull fancies.
The Christians tell me, that they leave all what they recognize as bad. I am not good according to the degree of my knowledge of good and bad; for if I was faithful in that measure in which I feel it my duty to be: how far would I be advanced now!
— I was with one, he took leave for Vienna, he urged me to accompany him to Dankow. I declined it, aware of the danger to fall in hazy reveries. I thank God I did, for dreadful, execrable are to me the sensations of those hours, which I passed with him on one week, rebellious against my Lord and baffling the truth already acknowledged.

Monday 9 July 21 Blessed Mary! You followed the right path! Place and time have not that importance in our views that they have in those of others; and therefore, neither change of situation nor lapse of years should weaken our Christian attachments.
I see it to be my business to fulfill, as a hireling, my day; and then to leave the world. We shall meet in happier regions. — But does not this way differ essentially from that of those Christians who flatter themselves after the enjoyments of life as Lucas for instance? It does, but he gives the power to either of us. Jesus said: Some are circumcised from the womb of their mothers. So am I. I feel not bound to any earthly comfort. I feel remorse of conscience in enjoying what they call permitted enjoyments.
My soul is a wretched one, which impairs immediately being left to itself and earthly comforts.
I have no idea of my ever being settled, taking a wife and indulging to my ease. God knows! I will be purified, I will be tried hard trials in other to obtain salvation. O how trifling are the moments of anguished pain, how inexpressible the gratification of everlasting life. — Reflected on the letters sent to the different Bishops. Was not that done out of selfish motives, certainly of the most selfish ones, and now yet the other letters to Kereg., full of the most blinded ambition.

 Respecting this I desire chastisement & I shall undergo it, if not too hard, willingly.
 — C. is serious now & rather melancholy, I am serious, too, I am denying I dare say & the Lord favours me with the enjoyments self-denial ever affords.
 Wednesday July 21 fallen again thrice. At first in gaing to the confessional yesterday, secondly more wretchedly in reading Deuterius, thirdly in jostling much in the presence of Br. Ph on my knees. They humbly pardon for such vile transgressions. Yet it must grow better with me. My heart damns me. How can I attain at the enjoyments of children of God in going so on. Now C. is in distress. Will I be resolved enough even to make a sacrifice of my own journey in order to aid him?
 I will and, I trust to God, he will enable me.
 What Paterson says on Marlyn: Surely it is impossible for pious young clergymen of the Church of England to read his memoirs without catching a portion of his spirit. Can no one be found, endowed with Marlyn's spirit & possessing his qualifications, whom you could send to follow up his labours in Bersia? — Suppose now Lee, upon remembering this, invites me to come, suppose the Government gives me an authorizing answer, then the matter is decided. — Oh gracious Lord! If I could do any thing to promote or to impede this all, I should feel disquieted, but
