it is to be attributed, it appears, to the evening hours.
Understood yesterday from Ellis that Schulze has written the review, I am excessively grieved that no other professor comes & wish often for Paus, yet I followed conscience, there was the appearance that an evangelical union would be sent, that they succeeded in preventing it is not my fault, therefore I must all leave to God.

12 July 37 Wednesday Ten o'clock Returned from Leienfeldt, where we dined, myself at the side of Edmund, Werner, Marks.
Agreed with Marx concerning the missions, which is a subject of sincere gratitude towards God. After dinner talk with Wernicke, who said: Mittle from M. is pardoned.
Is this really the first message of what my mind has sought after so earnestly & with so many sighs two years since? I recollect the moments when the first indications of his speedy release from prison were given. Oh God, God! Though my mind is troubled now by several things, by the purchase of the house, by the apprehension of seeing new infidel professors appointed here & so on, yet I shall triumph with joy if this information proves to be true.
I take it to be true indeed. Afterward accompanied Wassens. till evening, walked back, found the Studer & Schmiedes review about myself.

14 July Oh the nervous disposition of my body. Tremble & there is none who makes me tremble, I am dejected & there is nothing to deject me. The only two things, which my nervous fancy has got hold of is the inability about the purchase of the house & that Peter has declared his willingness to solve our line. But like a soothing zephyr goes through my nerves the vibration of thankfulness & peace with regard to M^r's enlargement. I cannot doubt of it reasonably though I was informed yesterday that John has received his release 8 weeks ago.

29 Nov. 37 Again has time swept on way among many things, also the sweet hope before mentioned.
It is gone & yet my mind feels at liberty concerning Mr. The prospect of this year as to heavens is not a bad one, in Moral 75, in Arts only 50-60, in John 107, but in Envy 80 which is enormous & in the Seminar 24 & a good number of such ones as seem to be clever & zealous. Not many forefathers new ones have come it is true: Gloch, Wandrey, Roman & Wurtembergian Moser & some dull ones as Schwan the proselyte etc, but some of the old are prospering very well Kretschel, Augustin particularly, Schneider, all fine lads, so also Fischer, Hase, Kuhlmei, Häus & with a good number I see how truth glides into them imperceptibly.
For instance last Monday after the Seminar three was with me Haber, Lange from Yamburg, Zeller from Preßin & they all were clever & .
